

- 1 From Al Pacino in Dog Day Afternoon to Paul Newman in The Verdict, the list of actors directed by Sidney Lumet reads like a Who's Who of Hollywood: Sean Connery, Dustin Hoffman, Jane Fonda, even Michael Jackson.

Sidney Lumet

- 5 "I think movies have probably... said more about this country than anything."

Lumet said the best films not only entertain but make viewers examine their consciences. His first film 1957's Twelve Angry Men explores prejudices inside the jury room.

- 10 Juror 10
"They're no good. There isn't one of them who is any good."

Network, his satirical take on television news, provided one of Hollywood's most repeated lines.

- 15 Howard Beale (played by Peter Finch)
"I'm as mad as hell and I'm not going to take this anymore."

- Born in 1924, Lumet entered show-business as a child actor but his real talent was behind the camera. Over fifty years he directed more than forty films including Serpico, Murder on the Orient Express, The Morning After and his last 20 movie 2007's Before the Devil Knows You're Dead.

Lumet's personal life was tumultuous with weddings to actress Rita Gam, glamorous heiress Gloria Vanderbilt, and Gail Horne, daughter of Lena Horne. In 1980 he married his fourth wife Mary Gimbel, a marriage that lasted until he died.

- 25 In a notoriously spendthrift industry Lumet stood out for bringing his movies under schedule and under budget. He lived and breathed New York City, the setting of many of his films.

- Sidney Lumet
30 "There's a certain world that I know very well and that is that world, I know street life..."

Lumet never wanted to live in Hollywood, which some thought is one of the reasons he never won an Oscar until the Academy finally gave him an honorary Oscar in 2005 for "lifetime achievement". Sidney Lumet was 86.

Terry McCarthy CBS News, Hollywood.